Traveling information

Flights to Iceland

There is only one international airport in Iceland and that is Keflavik International airport. There are many airlines that fly to Keflavik so it should not be a problem to find a flight.

Icelandair is partner of the Icelandic Ski Association and they fly from many cities in Europe and North America. You can book a flight with Icelandair here.

Traveling to Akureyri

From Keflavik airport it's possible to go two ways to Akureyri, by car or by plane.

By car – It's about 5 hour drive from Keflavik International airport (431 km). Car rental is available here.

By plane – It's not possible to fly from Keflavik International airport to Akureyri. You have to travel from Keflavik airport to Reykjavik airport. It's possible to take the Fly Bus straight to Reykjavik airport from Keflavik airport (takes about 40 minutes to drive). The flight from Reykjavik airport to Akureyri airport takes about 45 minutes. Here is possible to book this flight.
